SANJAEV, INDIA

Pramella's husband Sanjaev was preparing a Bible study for his church when a group of Hindu extremists broke into their home and stabbed him repeatedly with long knives. He died in hospital three days later. Pastor Sanjaev, 48, had been a passionate witness for Christ in the village in southern India where he served. "My husband used to say: 'I will die for Christ, because they don't want me to preach the gospel in this place' ", said his widow, who was injured in the attack. He was right. Pramella and her four children subsequently moved to another city. Despite their grief they have remained strong in their faith in Christ.

Please pray for Pramella and her children who are mourning the loss of their dad. Pray also for other Christians in India who have lost family members to attacks by extremists.

Thank God that Release's partner in India provides legal and practical aid to those who have been affected by persecution.
